Religion and Culture Beyond Tradition: Contemporary Perspectives

Sławomir Sztajer, Ewelina Berdowicz (red. nauk.)

Religion and Culture Beyond Tradition: Contemporary Perspectives offers a fresh perspective on the transformation of religion in an ever-changing world. Bringing together various approaches from the humanities and social sciences, it explores topics such as deconversion and post-religious identities, the legal and political determinants of religious freedom, the cognitive functions of religious artefacts, the digital strategies of minority communities, and the experiences of mobility, exclusion and intercultural contact.

Moving beyond existing models of belief and belonging, the authors consider religion to be a dynamic phenomenon interwoven with language, material culture, institutional structures, and systems of global inequality. The articles collected here offer a new perspective on the transformation of religion and culture in the modern world.
